An aerial photograph of a landscape, possibly a coastal or riverine area, with a white line drawn across it to delineate two regions. The line starts at the bottom left, moves diagonally upwards, then turns more horizontally towards the top right. The area to the left of the line is labeled 'APTITUD MARGINAL' and the area to the right is labeled 'APTITUD REGULAR'. The landscape features a mix of green, brown, and greyish tones, suggesting vegetation, bare ground, or water. There are some small, dark, rectangular shapes that could be buildings or structures.
